

YURTS of UTAH

YURTS 11-13: POWDER RIDGE YURTS

Powder Ridge Ski Touring is now managing the Steam Mill Yurt, the Bunchgrass Yurt and the Green Canyon Yurt, all of which are in designated winter non-motorized closures. Currently no guide services are available, but contact management to arrange a host.

Winter recreation on the Wasatch-Cache National Forest has changed a lot over the past twenty years. A drive through Logan Canyon on any winter weekend will involve a parade of snowmobiles and the trailers and trucks to pull them. Because of this increased motorized usage, concerned citizens have established the non-profit group, Nordic United. This group is dedicated to providing non-motorized winter recreation for all users and has been active in improving groomed trails and sponsoring Nordic and snowshoe races, clinics and events. Check out www.nordicunited.org for more information on how to be involved. The Powder Ridge yurts provide the opportunity for backcountry winter exploration in the Bear River range of the Wasatch.

YURT 11 STEAM MILL YURT

Location: Bear River Range, Northern Utah, Logan Canyon, Hells Kitchen Canyon

Length: 3.5 miles one-way

Elevation: Trailhead 6600'; Yurt 8100'

Size: Sleeps maximum 6

Amenities: 2 bunk beds and 2 cots; wood burning stove; LP gas cook stove and lantern; solar-powered lights; pots, pans, dishes and utensils for cooking and eating; pit toilet; wood provided – split what you burn.

Introduction: The approach to Steam Mill yurt provides a decent work out. It's not too terribly long, but winter days are short. My last trip to the yurt, I found myself arriving just before nightfall, even though I had started near lunch time. Give yourself enough time for a leisurely trek through the peaceful forest. Steam Mill yurt shares a parking lot with snowmobiles and one mile of the trail is on a groomed snowmobile trail. Terrain around the yurt provides beautiful backcountry steep for nice skiing, snowboarding, or a killer snowshoe workout. Steam Mill peak sits above the yurt. Snowshoeing is best around and below the yurt.

Season: December 1 – April 30

Reservations: For information and availability go to <https://sites.google.com/site/powderridgeskitouring/home> or email powderridgeyurts@gmail.com.

Fee: $50 reservation fee, per reservation to cover processing costs. $150 weekend nights (Friday and Saturday) and holidays, $100 weeknights

Other: No dogs may accompany a group to the yurt. This helps keep the snow fresh and clean. Also the yurt needs to be left in the same condition in which it was found or better. Please make sure that the dishes are clean and all food stuff is properly stored. Food should never be left out when you are away or even laying down to rest. Nothing except the plastic food bins are impervious to the sharp little teeth of mice.

YURTS
of UTAH

YURTS of UTAH

YURTS 11-13: POWDER RIDGE YURTS

YURT 12 BUNCHGRASS YURT

Location: Bear River Range, Northern Utah, Logan Canyon

Length: 3.85 miles one-way

Elevation: Trailhead 6324'; Yurt 8414'

Size: Sleeps maximum 6 – 2 bunkbeds, 2 pull-out mattresses

Amenities: Wood burning stove for heat; LP gas stove for cooking; white gas lantern; pit toilet; cooking and eating utensils for 6; ax for chopping wood, shovel for digging out, broom for cleaning up.

Introduction: During the summer Bunchgrass is a wonderful mountain biking trail. During the winter the route leads to wonderful backcountry ski opportunities in a designated winter non-motorized closure. Finding the Bunchgrass yurt is difficult unless others have gone before and left a trail to follow. The trail starts right from the road that runs through Logan Canyon and begins between the Tony Grove pull off and the Red Banks campground. There is a small gate off the road to the east that marks the starting point. Parking is available off the west side of the road and rangers regularly check on vehicles left in the parking area.

The first section of the trail runs by Bunchgrass Creek, after which it veers to the north and winds its way deeper into the backcountry. The yurt itself is made more difficult to find because it is white and the view can often be blocked by the snow surrounding it. All and all, go prepared with map, compass and GPS so if you need to break trail you can navigate your way around. The Outdoor Recreation website provides maps and GPS coordinates to download.

The route to the yurt sits out of avalanche danger with exception of one short section at the end that runs at a 35 degree angle. The backcountry skiing that surrounds the yurt is all steep enough to slide if the conditions condone it, so be prepared and check the avalanche report before you go.

Season: December 1 – April 30

Reservations: For information and availability go to <https://sites.google.com/site/powderridgeskitouring/home> or email powderridgeyurts@gmail.com.

Fee: $50 reservation fee, per reservation to cover processing costs.
$150 weekend nights (Friday and Saturday) and holidays, $100 weeknights

Other: No dogs allowed at the yurt.

YURTS
of
UTAH

YURTS 11-13: POWDER RIDGE YURTS

YURT 13 GREEN CANYON YURT

Location: Bear River Range, Northern Utah, Green Canyon, North Logan

Length: 3.75 miles one-way

Elevation: Trailhead 5165'; Yurt 6138'

Size: Sleeps 12

Amenities: 6 bunk beds with thick 3" pads; wood burning stove; LP gas Camp Chef® cook stove; pots and pans, plates and mugs; solar-powered lights; wood pile—split what you burn; and a permanent enclosed vault toilet installed by the United States Forest Service.

Introduction: Finding the Green Canyon yurt is easier than most as it lies just under 4 miles up a groomed road. Green Cyn is a groomed ski trail by partnership of Nordic United, the USFS, and North Logan City. Conditions can be found at www.nordicunited.org. Managed by Powder Ridge Touring, this yurt is perfect for cross-country skiing or snowshoe excursions as the terrain to the yurt is a gradual elevation gain and is in a designated winter non-motorized closure. Backcountry ski terrain is more difficult to find from this yurt. I suggest choosing a different yurt with easy access to great backcountry slopes if you're looking for turns. Green Canyon yurt sits right at the border of Mt. Naomi Wilderness Area. A pair of snowshoes will allow you to head into the wilderness for further exploration around the yurt. There is no avalanche terrain on the route to the yurt.

Season: December 1- April 30

Reservations: For information and availability go to <https://sites.google.com/site/powderridgeskitouring/home> or email powderridgeyurts@gmail.com.

Fee: $50 reservation fee, per reservation to cover processing costs. $200 weekend nights (Friday and Saturday) and holidays, $150 weeknights

Other: No dogs allowed at the yurt.

